EDINBURGH

Live and learn in the Scottish capital of Edinburgh with an Adelante Research Observation Assignment. This program is for serious academic students looking to add real research experience to their resume.

- Hands on research in large-animal surgery setting in a prestigious veterinary placement
- Historic horticulture opportunity in an extensive public garden located in the Scottish Highlands.
- Participate in a dynamic nutrition research project within a rigorous graduate studies setting on campus

Designed for the independent individual, Adelante Abroad programs promote real access to your host-city's culture and daily life. Rather than seeing things as a typical tourist, you will understand what it's really like to live in Scotland while enhancing your resume with professional international experience.

"I loved my time in Scotland! I got to spend every day watching unique surgeries, learning different veterinary techniques, and assisting with research. I received more hands-on experience during the Observation/Research assignment than I have in any veterinary clinic in the United States. I may even be listed as an author on a research study that is being submitted this fall. I also took a chance to travel around the UK and Ireland every weekend! There is no end to the fun stuff you can do in Edinburgh!"
Kelsy, University of Arkansas, Veterinary Program 2013

My internship gave me tasks which challenged me, but helped to broaden my perspective outside of American viewpoints. I gained a new perspective on my field of study that would not have been possible in the United States. Although it was challenging to hear opinions and perspectives so very different from my own, I learned quite a bit through my internship abroad.
Kelley, Iowa State, Agricultural Business and Marketing Program 2014
